SUSTAINABLE SUPPORT TO AMPLIFY SCHOLARS' IMPACT

The Vision

Whether they're testing carbon-sequestering soil amendments, developing a secure web-based contact tracing tool to prevent the spread of COVID-19, or revitalizing cultural burn practices with California Native tribes to decrease the intensity of wildfires, graduate students are working toward a brighter, healthier, safer world for us all.

In order to spearhead discoveries with global impact, however, graduate students must spend their time accelerating vital research rather than pursuing outside employment to pay for it. Graduate students fund the costs of their education through a combination of teaching and research stipends, loans, part-time work and fellowships.

Fellowships give graduate students the gift of time to focus exclusively on research with transformative impact.

Robust fellowship support is critical to recruiting and retaining top graduate students from California, the nation and the world. It is also an essential tool in increasing social and economic mobility and reducing student debt. With stable support from fellowships, graduate students can solve problems and scale their innovations faster.

We have a vision to remove financial barriers to make graduate education affordable for every scholar.
