New jobs, internships, and career-related events from the UC Davis Internship and Career Center (ICC)

Have you created your Handshake profile yet? Get started now at ucdavis.joinhandshake.com

The Internship and Career Center (ICC) has partnered with Handshake—a modern career development platform—to replace Aggie Job Link. Handshake is a one-stop shop for students searching for internships and part-time jobs, and launching their careers. It will be a more user-friendly tool for employers and campus departments posting student positions.
With Handshake students can:

- Access personalized job recommendations based on their major and interests
- Register for career fairs
- Manage on-campus interviews with top companies
- Schedule meetings with ICC career advisors

Handshake's core design is built on a network concept. Employers can post one position at multiple campuses which will create more opportunities for UC Davis students. The ICC expects this new platform will connect more UC Davis students to posted positions.

Deseray Rivas grew up in La Puente California and attended the University of California, Santa Barbara. She graduated with a degree in Chicanx Studies and since graduating has been working in education non-profit. She has been with City Year for four years, previously as a Program Manager with City Year Los Angeles and most recently as a Recruitment Manager in the West Region. Her work as a program manager with City Year Los Angeles is where her passion grew for Restorative Practices. During her time as program manager in the beautiful city of Boyle Heights she was further introduced to Restorative Justice by Michelle Ferrer and the Roosevelt High School Community.

Outside of work Deseray enjoys time with her family and her friends. Enjoying good music, good food, and love. Her favorite part of it all has been the gift of being mom to a spunky, independent bright 2-year-old named Sofia. They spend most of their time dancing, singing to the Coco soundtrack and making silly murals outside with side walk chalk.

Chad Fraga is a Regional Recruitment Manager with City Year (a national non-profit organization with Americorps aimed to recruit idealistic, young, motivated leaders to serve a year of their lives trying to "upset the set-up" of the inequities in our education system). Chad graduated with his Bachelor of Arts in Sociology from University of the Pacific in 2014. He has since aimed his professional career with his goals of service and being a global citizen. He served a year with City Year post college in Sacramento. He then spent some time living and working internationally in Argentina. Upon returning, he worked at University of the Pacific in higher education in student life, working with students. He now serves as a Regional Recruitment Manager back with City Year where he has the privilege of meeting students and aligning them and their passions to also possibly serve a year with City Year.
